

REMOVE BOLSHEVISM CAUSE, WILSON SAYS

President Says He Does Not Oppose Radicalism, But Insists Reason For It Must Be Studied.

TALKS AT BILLINGS, MONT.

Address in Support of Treaty Made to Large Crowds—Makes Reference to Spread of Red Doctrine.

BILLINGS, Mont., Sept. 11.—President Wilson, in a lengthy address here today, again told an audience that filled the fairgrounds auditorium that the United States must either accept the present treaty or none at all. He declared that it would be impossible ever again to draft a treaty that would be accepted by all of the nations that participated in the negotiations that resulted in the present document.

The president insisted that the present treaty was not a treaty of compromise, but that it was a treaty "built up on straight lines."

He dwelt upon the plain provisions of the treaty as certain to create in creating uniform conditions of labor everywhere.

This feature alone, he declared, would restore industrial stability.

"The nations that have no monopoly," he said, "and selection of this treaty will strengthen the bonds of monopoly representation."

Lent e Apostles Here.

The president charged that right here in the United States there are "apostles of Lenin." He said these men are the apostles of the knife, of assassination and of disorder and anarchy. We must see that they cannot try to impose their program of the government of the United States. He then repeated his declaration that the Bolshevik government in Russia is a minority one alone.

One of the little picturesque episodes of the president's tour of the Billings streets was when he passed through the little band of sailors from the sky hospital who cheered him and waved flags at him. The president stopped his automobile and made a short address of thanks to them.

How to Fight Radicalism.

Just before he ended his address President Wilson took note of the report that Montana is noted for radicalism. He declared that he would not fight radicalism so long as it was orderly radicalism.

"One way to beat radicalism is to deprive it of food—abolish the grievances that cause agitation," said the president.

I don't intend to oppose radicalism so long as there is reason for it.

The president then stated that one of the results of the coming conference at Washington between capital and labor was to abolish classes of unrest between the two classes.

Defends Nations.

President Wilson defended the various nations partly to the treaty, mentioning Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan.

"These nations keep their international obligations," he said, "and the United States will do the same. We always have. We kept our promises when we were weak, and will keep them now that we are strong, for we are the flower of mankind so far as civilization is concerned."

The president closed by declaring he was convinced the treaty will be ratified. He based this on what the plain people have told him, he said, and recited various incidents of the trip where persons in his audience had so assured him.

EXPANSION IS BEING TALKED

Wave of Confidence in Future of Eastern Empire Is Sweeping Over Entire Country.

In The Associated Press.

TOKYO, Sept. 11.—Developments in relation to the continuing movement from the supreme camp of discussion here. The general attitude of the Japanese is calm. In await the final action by the United States Senate.

Some of the members of the diet are reported to be addressing themselves to the question of the expansion of the empire. They ask whether the United States is likely to enforce by arms a possible new treaty with Germany, returning Germany directly to China. Those who have addressed the inquiries to the government are said to be favorably impressed by the government's stand. The Japanese have given up the Pacific and to be inclined to establish a connection between the coming of the fleet and the Pacific war.

A wave of motion and confidence in Japan's future greatness seems to be sweeping over the empire. In a

Police Find Relics Stolen From Hohenzollern Castles

BERLIN, Sept. 11.—Thieves from the castle of former Emperor William and the Crown Prince Friedrich, during the revolution, took away many objects of value, including the January and March ceremonies of the spartacists and communists are still engaging the attention of the police.

Slowly the authorities have been able to trace some of the valuables that were taken by the sailors who occupied the ex-emperor's palace and that of his son for a time, but an immense amount has been taken away by underground methods and may never be recovered.

One of the most important objects can be laid to a Hamburg professor. A marine had stolen two canvas portraits from the imperial castle, failed to get rid of them in Berlin and brought them to a questionable dealer in Hamburg.

The dealer approached the professor, who recognized the canvases, gave a check but stopped payment, and notified the finance ministry. The paintings were thereupon confiscated.

There are many more yet recovered, however, including a little figurine in wood dating from 1858, a Katherine von Bora by an unknown artist, also of wood, a "warrior with ladies" by Palamedes, and a score of other carvings and paintings, principally by German artists from the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

Recently he passed a writing test of two hours and fifteen minutes, his "copy" necessitating only two corrections.
